Sign language redefines IPL viewing for deaf fans

In a first for live sports broadcasting, Star Sports has added sign language interpretation to its IPL feed

VENKATA KRISHNA B Chennai, April 4

SECONDS AFTER VIRAT Kohli is dismissed during the Royal Challengers Bangalore match against Lucknow Super Giants on April 2, Kinjal Shah's expression on the bottom right-hand corner of the television screen catches the atmosphere at the M Chinnaswamy Stadium.

With her right index finger, she draws an imaginary circle, indicating the stadium, before making a screaming expression. The next moment, both her hands come down together, palms down, indicating the drop in noise levels. Then, it's finger on the lips to indicate the total silence at the stadium. In a matter of seconds, the deaf community experiences what a pin-drop silence feels like in a packed arena of nearly 35,000.

This IPL, Star Sports 3 has joined hands with India Signing Hands (ISH), a Mumbai-based broadcast company, to add Indian Sign Language interpretation to its feed. While the Hindi language commentary is on, a sign language interpreter provides a live commentary targeted at the 63 million deaf people

This IPL, Star Sports 3 has joined hands with India Signing Hands (ISH), a Mumbai-based broadcast company, to add Indian Sign Language interpretation to its feed

ple in India, many of them cricket enthusiasts. This is the first known instance of sign language being used for live commentary for any sports in India.

Watching the sign language interpreter on television from his residence at Mumbai's Malabar Hill, Alok Kejriwal, founder & CEO of India Signing Hands, tells The Indian Express that it's the first time in his 50 years of watching cricket that he has felt included. "Earlier, when a cricketer walked into the stadium, it didn't feel too different from when any person walks in. I wasn't hearing what his previous record at the venue was and what duel he had had with a bowler. I never knew what the atmosphere was when Dhoni or Kohli walked into a stadium or when they were dismissed. Now I can feel the noise when they walk in or the silence at the ground. Moreover, I'm able to watch it with everyone. These are new experiences... to watch it with friends and family. We sat as equals," says the 62-year-old.

Minutes before the match begins, the interpreter builds the excitement by starting with the countdown before the first ball is bowled. From there on, they translate every word of the Hindi commentary, providing insights that the deaf community probably never experienced during a cricket match.

What stands out in their interpretation are the expressions that convey different emotions. For example, in case of a thrilling close call that is referred to the third umpire, the interpreters refer to the heart beat, indicating the tension in the air.

"When it comes to sign language, expressions are like grammar," says Mansi Dharmaraj Shah, an interpreter for the IPL. "Without the expressions, the deaf community will not experience the entire picture. It will look flat and the language will remain incomplete. It will only resemble a gesture. So expressions are important," she adds.

Veg thali cheaper in March, non-veg becomes costlier

THE COST OF household vegetarian thali saw a marginal sequential decline in March, due to a 2% fall in tomato prices compared to the previous month, reports Sandip Das. Non-vegetarian thali got costlier by 2% last month because of a 5% increase in broiler meat prices, data from Crisil showed. The veg thali prices rose 7% each last month on year because of costlier onion, tomato and potato. The non-veg thali prices dropped by 7% last month because of a sharp 16% fall in poultry meat price on year.
